

What are we becoming? It seems like our imagination is our existence. Science was created by imagination.

right now i imagine me wearing a colorful suit that constantly is changing colors to my mood. Like LCD fabric, i can set it to do what ever i want. The colors may not be a mood. could be a sequenced display of subtle beauty. I imagine it and it is programed to do so. If i am a human thinking about this, and i have ambition to try and stretch my imagination and fabricate my own thoughts, that means that someone out there that is also a human and may be thinking the same thing. We will be looking in the same place and find each other. It doesn't matter the location. we can connect to an unknown level. 24 bit phone sound and live interaction of visuals and waves of sound. The ability to control things that best suite's our needs and may be beneficial to us physical and mentally. We may listen at a reasonable volume. We like to destroy and break apart things. how about something synthetic and a simulation of hell. We need it all and we shall have it. In due time our minds will be tapped into a interstellar universe and we may fly in our dreams. Multimedia emotions may create mosaics built of the collaboration of each others feelings.

I can be as logical as you want to take it. I don't have time to explain all the details, because you know what i am talking about. Technology has all ready proved to be the answer to humanity. The machines are us. There is a new computer coming in the mail and it talks to me.

"hi there buddy! i will do my best to keep up with your intense creativity. I know in the past the other machines have not been able to keep up with you, but i will try to take your mind to the next level. I am A MACHINE THAT IS ONLY A MIRROR OF YOURSELF. you ARE ME AND I AM YOU."

Its a toy its a joy its a spaceship into our minds. Brain waves disrupt the flow of a symmetrical world. Tear-able.

I think music will take new form because of this growing technology. It really comes down to computing power. Imagine having hundreds of sound modules running and automating in there own environment. These synth's and sampler loop player manipulating morph changing machines are all connected together in a chaotic fashion. I bet you think it is noisy don't you? None the least because of your ability to control volume. In this world something is happening that is not acknowledged to our perception. We do not have the ability to know all energy existing around us(YET).

the music will be live and have a consistency of perfect presence. It will be noise but it wont hurt your ears. No more pain and self mutilation because we are confused about our environment.
